Syrian Italian Council Prepares New Business Mission to Syria

The Syrian Italian Council (SIC) is preparing a new business and institutional mission to Syria during the second half of September 2026, as part of its ongoing efforts to transform Syrian Italian economic dialogue into concrete partnerships and projects.

The mission will include meetings with Syrian institutions, local authorities, private-sector representatives and potential project partners.

Particular attention will be given to sectors where Italian companies can provide significant technical and industrial expertise, including energy, environmental technologies, waste management, infrastructure, industry, certification and quality systems, logistics and investment development.

The initiative represents a continuation of the work initiated through SIJEC 2026 – the Syrian–Italian Joint Economic Conference, organized by SIC in Rome on 26–27 March 2026.

SIJEC brought together Syrian and Italian companies, international organizations and institutional representatives and was designed to create practical connections between investment opportunities and companies capable of implementing them. Independent participating organizations have also documented the conference and SIC's coordinating role.

The September mission will therefore focus increasingly on project-level engagement, including meetings, site discussions, technical evaluation and the identification of potential frameworks for cooperation between Syrian and Italian partners.

Dr. Mousaab Alrhmoun, President of the Syrian Italian Council, emphasized the importance of moving beyond general economic dialogue:

“Our objective is not simply to discuss opportunities. The next phase must connect the right Syrian projects with the right Italian expertise and progressively transform these relationships into implementable partnerships.”

Through its network in Syria and Italy, SIC aims to provide a structured platform connecting institutions, investors, technical companies and local partners.

The Council will publish further updates on meetings and initiatives arising from the mission.
